SCHEMES, NOT ECHEMING.

its promised session for the public yesterday, when who so would was allowed the rivilege of laying before it the solution of the transportation problem.

Several plans were submitted by enthustastic exponents of their merits. Sufficient time to give an idea of their plan was allowed to the respective speakers and the cheerful information given that they could turn in to the Commission all the literature concerning it that they might wish.

This is liberal and argues good well and a contempt for tiresome toll on the part of the Commissioners. The magnitude and expenses of some of the submitted schemes rather take away one's breath. But any Rapid Transit scheme has got to have Titanic proportions and will cost a pretty sum. No mean supply of gray matter in the skull is needed for the critical examination of any fit plan for transportation of

One thing is to be guarded against. All the promoters of the several schemes are of course eager for the adoption of their own plan. Some of them may have very large axes to grind. What the Commission must do is to disregard the promoter and the aveand look singly and concentratedly at the scheme. If it is the best, that is the one we

THE DANGER NOW.

There are nations, great enough in national brains, to be deeply and effectively moved by questions of abstract justice. The United States Republic is not one of these. The spur of concrete wrong, of an injury which has materialized, is required to prick us to action. We are emotional, violent in our minds and sometimes in our acts, for a short time, and then we collapse into the inanest subsidence.

The Indian war is, we may assume, ended. The hostiles have filed into the Government quarters and are generally supposed to have surrendered their arms. With such "Kittle Kattle" as Indians, perfect amity is by no means assured even yet. But grant that it has come to pass and that the Indians are peaceful, trusting wards of the nation again.

What will be done to redress the wrongs we have perpetrated upon them? Will the disreputable agents, who have villainously treated these poor creatures, be examined scarchingly, and the abuse rectified? Will we begin, at last, a humane, large-minded policy towards the Indians, and solicitously secure to them their rights? Unfortunately for the Indians and for ourselves, the answer must be: No. Yet it is a crying

A CLUB QUESTION.

In matters which concern the members of a club, taken collectively, it seems perfeetly fair that the wishes of a large majority should prevail in the, so to speak, do-Most clubs exist primarily as social organi. zations. If the larger portion of the members do not want liquor to be obtained at the Club on Sunday, it is right enough to bar out liquor for that day.

But it does seem Philistine and uncivilized, at this stage of the world, for a prominent and swell club to take such a stand In the question of temperance the most im portant point is not to unjustly constrain individual liberty. Any man has a right to drink spirituous liquors in his home or Sunday or any other day. A club is virte ally another home for its members, and t seems narrow and puritanical to deny to its members the privilege of enjoying a drink within it on Sunday.

But if the Club wishes to so have it, it their own concern. They can determin this point just as they might resolve, if the majority so wished it, to have all the furniture in the house upholstered with leather. Only these views are narrow and unworth; of men of the world.

MULTIPLYING HORRORS.

Siberia is a country sufficiently accuracy even under the neglect and contempt which nature has shown to it. Bleak, sterile stretches of desolate land unblessed with any cheering vistas, it sleeps in death-like lethargy under the numbing cold. But Russia has stretched a greater pall of horror over the land by driving her political outcasts there to linger on in pain, misery and unjust affliction.

Now comes the crowning horror, unles indeed it may be welcomed as a harbinger of relief, for death seems preferable to Where are the uphoisterer, and the dress-Siberian prison life at least. Truly, Siberia is the land of a triple death, and there is no life in it.

DOUGHERTY A MURDERER.

The jury in the trial of DOUGHERTY has handed in a verdict which brands him a murderer. Mr. CLARKE wished to secure a conviction of murder in the second degree, which might consign DOUGHERTY to State Prison for life, and the jury has rendered a verdict to that effect.

The community will be glad to know that a man of DOUGHERTY's character is to be put where he can do no harm. That justice has been preserved while securing this desirable result is very satisfactory.

The introduction of a more eclectic sysshould be welcomed by the true lovers of music. Wagner is not the one musical genius of the world, though he is undoubtedly the most brilliant star in the modern fir mament of music. One of the visiting dresses made for a beauty of Chicago was of violet cloth and velvet. The skirt, of cloth, was laid on the waistband in four tiny plaits directly in front, so that there was a suggestion of fulness in the fall of the skirt. At the back it was brought up on the bodice with half a dozen flat platts at each side, and the looseness and fulness which were thus left over the hips fell in an effect of papiers. To make a skirt of this fashion it is necessary to hang the dress on the band and then turn the tem up to make the bottom hang evenly, regardless of the fact that by so doing the weave of the cloth may run in a very signag-like fashion around the bottom.

GUNNING WITH A CLUB.

Pennsylvania Novel and Effective Way of Killing Game. A young Englishman named David, who lives at Adamstown, on the line between Lancaster and Berks Counties, is believe by his friends to be, the champion bird killer and rabbit catcher in Pennsylvania, says an exchange. And yet he never uses a gun. During the partridge season just closed David excelled his record and supplied his friends on all hands with the choicest birds. His weapon is a club, three and one-half feet long, and from one to two inches thick. Armed with five of these a nied by his English bull dog, he will haunt the woods from morning to night without food or drink. His well-trained dog stands food or drink. His well-trained dog stands the birds, and David, with unerring aim, dispatches them with his club.

He seldom misses. On one occasion he killed seven partridges with one fling of his club. He slso takes them on the wing with neatness and dispatch, and has been known in this way to kill two at a thirty-yard throw. His skill is comparable to that of the David who slew Goliath, the Philistine clant.

As a rabbit catcher his equal is unknown.

Probably his most wonderful feat in capturing the bunnies was done a few days ago.

NEW YORK SUNDAY NEWS THE PAPER FOR THE MILLION.

For over 20 years my life was made miserable by frequent and terrible beadaches. At times the were so severe I feared I would go insane. I was treated by nearly every physician in this city, but none could cure me, or even relieve me, except by TIS THE GREATEST! TIS THE BEST! large doses of morphine. My head would shake so badly it had to be held. No one could suffer more than I did. At last I bought a bottle of Dr. Greeue'. Nervura, and the very first bottle stopped the headaches, and I have never had any trouble with EVER SOLD AT BUY IT AND SEE.
